The Queen on the Way

NEW YORK, June 6.—The new palatial steamship Queen of the Pacific, of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company's line, which sailed for San Francisco by way of the Straits of Magellan to-day, will stop at Rio Janeiro for one week and at Valparaiso for a week on the passage. She will be commanded by Captain Alexander. Martin Bulger, of San Francisco, will go out as a passenger to California and Dr. F. H. Williams of the Baltimore locomotive works will go to Rio Janeiro as a passenger.

Accident at Coney Island.

CONEY ISLAND, June 6.—This morning a runaway locomotive on the elevated railroad fell off the track at the switch at West Brighton and nine persons were injured and the track torn up.

Steamboat Explosion.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 6.—The steamer Evansville blew up this morning. The mate, Owen Gilmore, was fatally injured and the fireman and ten others fatally scalded. No passengers were injured. Engineer Baker, the mate and three negroes and two hogsheads of tobacco were blown from amidships into the river. The boat drifted and caught fire but the flames were easily extinguished. The fireman and ash puller were wounded fatally.

Printers in Council.

ST. LOUIS, June 6.—The president of the typographical union in his address to-day said there were too many compositors outside the union and urges that this should be overcome. Resolutions were referred endorsing the action of the iron and steel workers and declaring it was the duty of all typographical unions and wage workers to lend moral and material support to the strike till its objects were obtained.

A Slight Mistake.

GALVESTON, June 6.—News Dallas special: This morning an attempt was made by four masked men to rob the west bound express on the Missouri Pacific near Denton. The train was flagged but suspicions having been aroused, when the robbers attempted to board the train they were met with a volley which put them to flight. They mistook the mail for the express. One of them was killed. A posse are in pursuit.

Disastrous Storm.

PETERSBURG, Va., June 6.—A storm in Northampton county, North Carolina, yesterday ruined cotton, wheat and corn crops. Felton's academy and many other large buildings were demolished by wind, and telegraph poles on the Seaboard and Roanoke railroad were blown down. Two more persons are reported killed.

Fell into Trouble

DALLAS, Texas, June 6.—The sheriff of El Paso county has got himself into trouble. Saturday night he attached a train to satisfy some creditor on the Texas and Pacific railroad and the U. S. authorities in the western district have arrested him for obstructing mails, as he failed to detach the mail.

A "Free Beer" Campaign.

CHARLES CITY, Iowa, June 6.—The members of the State Amendment committee of Iowa claim that a campaign is to be made of free beer, whisky and money and importations of voters to defeat Prohibitionists on June 27th in this State.

A Novel Test.

COLDWATER, Mich., June 6.—Ex-Chief Engineer Drake of the fire department was held yesterday for trial in the Circuit Court on the charge of burning buildings last summer so as to prove the efficiency of the city fire department.

Produce Exchange Opened

PITTSBURG, June 6.—The new produce exchange was formally opened to-day. Telegrams were received from the leading exchanges of the country.

Among the Strikers.

COVINGTON, Ky., June 6.—The strikers met this afternoon, but after a long session failed to agree. They have appealed to President Jarret.

Judge Pillsbury Improving.

POWHATAN, Ill., June 6.—Judge Pillsbury, shot by the Rioters' mob on the Chicago and Alton train, is in an improved condition and recovery is expected.

Fire at Ogdensburg.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., June 6.—The flouring mills of Henry R. Sal, the largest in Northern New York, burned last night. Loss, $75,000; insurance, $45,000.

Chicago Notes.

CHICAGO, June 6.—At a meeting of representatives of various Italian societies of the city last evening it was resolved to have an appropriate public demonstration on the 11th inst., the day set apart for the funeral of Garibaldi. A committee was appointed to invite co-operation and participation of local civic and military bodies.

Indications are that Craig, (Dem.) is elected Supreme Judge in the 5th district over McCulloch, Rep.

The brickmakers have accepted the offer of a compromise made by employers and go to work this morning at wages ranging from $2 62½ to $3 00. The workmen agree not to strike again this year, and work with non-union men. They couldn't do flatting without extra pay. The advance of 12½ cents is just half what the strikers demanded.

Killed by a Cave.

OROVILLE, June 6.—Robert McGregor, an old resident of Cherokee Flat, was caved on and instantly killed last evening in a tunnel at Flea valley.

Killed her Husband.

EAST SAGINAW, Mich., June 6.—Saturday night in Billings township, Anna Stevenson shot her husband. Will am dead for trying to gain access to his house after she had barred him out. The parties, though married a long time, had quarreled then.

Stands on his Dignity.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 6.—John G. Jackson, gubernatorial nominee of the greenbackers, writes that he will not be a figure head and will not accept the nomination unless ratified by respectable sized county meetings.

THE TURF.

Sporting Notes.

LONDON, June 6.—The prize for the gold vase was won by Tristan; Chippendale 2d; Credo 3d.

At Ascot the first stakes were won by Valentine; Mistake, (formerly Lorillard's) 2d; Leghorn 3d.

Parliamentary Proceedings.

LONDON, June 6.—In commons in committee on the repression bill Harcourt consented to insert provisions assuring prompt trial, causing judges for special courts to be selected by ballot instead of being appointed, and obliging judges to state reasons for convicting in open court.

Races at Coney Island.

NEW YORK, June 6.—One mile: Won by Mamie Fields; Marchioness second, Maggie O third.

Seven furlongs for three year olds: Won by Terrell; Col. Sellers second; Olette third; time 1:31¼.

Hurdle race: Won by Ohio Boy; Dalpariar second; Gift third.

CRIMINAL NOTES.

LAWRENCE, Ks., June 6.—Davis Bain was enticed to the river by a colored prostitute to-day and two negroes—Frank King and George Robertson—murdered and robbed him and then threw the body into the river. The murderers were arrested.

The Cotters of Skye.

New York Times.

The persistent refusal of the cotters of Skye to pay rent, considering the hardships they have so long endured, is not to be wondered at. Skye is the second largest of the Hebrides. Its area is 547 square miles. The land is for the most part mountainous and dreary, and the rainfall so excessive that agricultural pursuits have long been unprofitable. It used to be said of Greenock on the Clyde that it always rained there, but the remark would apply more truthfully to Skye, for it occurs there that the dry days of a year might be easily counted. The manager of the O. & C. R. R. extension has [illegible] to accept the survey through the Grave creek hills which makes it necessary to take the long tunnel instead of the short one. Work on the short tunnel has been stopped by telegraph and work on the long one will be begun immediately. Its length will be [illegible] feet.

The annual meeting of the Pioneer Society of southern Oregon was held at Ashland last Thursday, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. C. Beekman; vice presidents, J. P. Walker and L. J. C. Duncan; secretary, S. J. Day; treasurer, J. M. Hoffer. Their annual reunion will be held some time in September.

Jacksonville Sentinel: Last week Jos. Clough refused to pay toll on 400 head of cattle passing through the canyon. The company brought suit before a justice in Canyonville and on the day of trial asked for a continuance, as they expected to be beaten, and they want to collect all the toll possible. On [illegible] J. F. Gazley, Sr., J. F. Gazley, Jr., and N. J. Sullivan, the gate keeper, were arrested for obstructing the public highway and taken to Roseburg. The teamsters of this and [illegible] and are put to any trouble [illegible] will defend them free of all expense. This is a good opportunity for teamsters to save money, and they ought to take the hint.

The prospects [illegible] Puyallup valley were never better than at present.

Yesler & Anderson's new mill at Seattle started up last week and is expected to turn out from 20,000 to 30,000 feet of lumber daily when thoroughly at work.

B. F. Dean of [illegible] has been in the business of canning clams for some time past and now thinks of branching out into the canning of salmon and other kinds of fish.

Some complaint has been made by settlers in the Chimacum valley about fish traps being placed in or near the mouth of the Chimacum creek, preventing fish from ascending the stream.

Dr. Turner of Olympia is preparing to build on his ground in the [illegible] district [illegible] two story brick building, 40x80 feet. The foundation will be of Bellingham bay stone.

The foundation of the new mill at Port Townsend has been laid, and the frame timbers are being rapidly put in place. A force of workmen are crowding the structure with all possible speed.

There has been a fair average catch of seals on Neah Bay and Quillayute this season, but, owing to the advance in cost of catching and decline in value in foreign markets the season's business on the whole has been unprofitable.

The contract for the new engine house at Seattle has been awarded to E. W. [illegible] bonds for the faithful execution of the work have been placed at $10,000 and the contractor is required to begin the same within 10 days.

It is believed that there are 500 elk ranging on the headwaters of the streams and tributaries heading up in the Olympic range and putting into Gray's harbor. Fish, both salt and fresh water, are abundant. It is simply a paradise for sportsmen.

Chronicle: Osceola is the name of a postoffice located in the richest agricultural district of King county, situated between Green and White rivers, about eight miles above the forks and forty miles southeast of Seattle. It is not only a good farming country but is the finest stock grazing region in the territory. Cattle graze through the winter months without a mouthful of grain or hay and are always in good beef condition in the early spring. Fat cattle have been [illegible] range in March that had gone through the winter with no any care whatever.

The Chehalis river is a magnificent stream of water, over 100 miles in length and is navigable for [illegible] steamers for a distance of [illegible] miles [illegible] The valley averages [illegible] in width and although settled with a class of thrifty, industrious farmers, yet it has been but recently isolated from communication with the outside world. At present there are but two villages and trading posts in the valley—Elma, [illegible] miles northwest from Olympia, and Montesano, [illegible] miles still further down the valley. The latter point is only [illegible] miles from Gray's harbor.

Congressional Work.

CHICAGO, June [illegible]—Specials from Washington state that the general impression is now that congress will adjourn about the 1st of July. [illegible] the county seat of Spokane county, is distant from Sprague 22 miles. All the land intervening is desirable for settlement, suitable for pasture or fit for cultivation. The whole country seems [illegible] waiting for labor and capital richly to reward them both.

Cheney is a well laid out town [illegible] real [illegible] for its prosperity upon a rich and well settled agricultural country [illegible] I am informed that the land adjacent to Cheney is excellent [illegible] surpassed by any [illegible]

[illegible] this town with Sprague, it is quiet and seems deserted while Sprague is all life, bustle and [illegible] But there is considerably [illegible] business done at Cheney as the well stocked stores and busy counters bear witness.

THE SHIPPING QUESTION IN POLITICS.

PORTLAND, May 31, 1882.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In Saturday's paper, noticing the pendency of a bill to promote the shipping interests by relieving vessels of taxation, you put the questions: "Why doesn't congress go to the root of the matter?" and "Why not allow American citizens to buy ships where they can buy them cheapest?" As the democratic state platform has presented the issue of the repeal of the navigation law, perhaps these questions should be answered for the information of voters, if not for argument to your readers.

First, congress has not made up its mind what is the "root of the matter." There is logic enough but a lack of truth in the proposition that cheap ships purchased abroad would restore the lost carrying trade, but on the other hand there is a lead certainty that the repeal of the navigation law, so called, would lead to the further loss of the coastwise trade, which is only secured by this law. The repeal of the navigation law would soon throw all the coastwise trade into the hands of British steamship owners. Repeal the navigation law and soon the O. R. & N. Co.'s line from Portland to San Francisco would have competition enough. There is nothing but this law in the way of the Chinese Six Companies putting on boats under the flag of the [illegible] Dragon to carry the whole democratic party up Salt river, where it belongs. This party is responsible for the congressional action that gave the first great blow to American commerce and navigation. The decline of American shipping in the foreign trade began in that portion of the union where the democratic party held high rule, and when at a [illegible] the confederate constitution was made to provide for free ships. The democratic party is disloyal to the shipping interest in its instincts and [illegible] It has never [illegible] the repeal of any taxation to lighten the burdens of [illegible] our ships.

[illegible] the repeal of the navigation law. If [illegible] foreign built ships would restore the [illegible] Congress is wise in refusing to force [illegible] business by turning in the shipping of the whole world to compete against the coastwise trade. With the coasting trade lasts there is hope for the shipping interest. But destroy that, and then tend [illegible] Great Britain and where do you think the trade sovereignty of the United States would reside? Our country had better apply for annexation to Canada or Mexico while there is some [illegible] for the democratic party leaves us without a [illegible]

[illegible] cheap ships [illegible] is the cheap [illegible] the British ship broker, and the British ship builder and the British press [illegible] knows it who knows nothing [illegible] subject. In Saturday's paper you have described [illegible] It is employment for their ships and not more ships at any price that is essential for our shipowners' prosperity. Any [illegible] can explain this [illegible] convention. The pretence that the whole tariff system must be overthrown [illegible] purpose of restoring the shipping interests is the [illegible] British [illegible]

Fred Archer, the celebrated English jockey, is described as a tall, emaciated, cadaverous man, with projecting lips, a slight stoop, decidedly round shoulders and long misshapen legs. To keep his weight down to 117 pounds he often breakfasts on two seidlitz powders, eschews meat and vegetables and subsists almost entirely upon bread and unsweetened tea. He is worth $350,000, though.

Not only did Senator Blair, of New Hampshire, at a dinner provided by Capt. Eads, to which he was not invited, instead of one to which Senator David Davis had invited him, but when he came to apologize to the latter he caused him to snort with indignation by alluding to his dinner party as a supper. Blair will find out there are worse things than trying to compel the Mississippi to flow north.

President Eliot of Harvard has that last best gift of man—tact. At one time his students developed an unpleasant liking for sitting on the college fence. The president was at a loss how to break up the practice. At last one evening, as the students were sitting on the fence singing, etc., the president said: "Gentlemen, allow me to congratulate you on having adopted the Yale custom." He was never troubled afterward by students sitting on the fence.

Replying formally to the invitation to attend the reunion of the Army of the Potomac in June, Gen. Grant writes: "I accept with great pleasure; probably will reach the city on the [illegible] and remain until the last of the week, and Mrs. Grant with me. I retain very pleasant recollections of my two years' residence in Detroit and of the many pleasant acquaintances I had formed at the time, and look forward with agreeable anticipations to my third visit (only the third) since 1851."

Bishop Wigger, of the Newark Catholic Diocese, has examined the play known as the "Two Orphans," and has found it very objectionable in character, with suggestions throughout of immorality. He has therefore prohibited the acting of the immoral drama again by any Catholic society in the diocese. The bishop's attention was called to it by its production in Newark some time ago by the Catholic Institute Dramatic Association of that city. The objection to the play arose from the fact that a Sister of Charity in the prison practiced an act of deception to save one of the Two Orphans from ruin.

How Gilbert and Sullivan wrote their comic operas together is described by Mr. [illegible] They sit down and talk and smoke innumerable cigarettes together," he says. "When they are getting their ideas together, Gilbert says to Sullivan, 'I've got an idea.' Sullivan screws his glass into his eye, looks at Gilbert critically for a moment and says, 'Have you? I really should not have thought it of you.' 'I want the girl to sing something like this,' continues Gilbert. 'Make it the [illegible]' puts in Sullivan, 'and by the way, I want you to write something for that chorus—something that they can sing [illegible] and so on, and so they talk and joke and smoke cigarettes till the [illegible] evolved."

On the 1st of May, Angus McDonald, a Waterloo veteran, died at Oxbridge, Ont. He was born in Islay [illegible] February 1777 and in 1801 enlisted as a driver in the Royal Artillery and afterwards served in the Peninsula under Sir John Moore and the Duke of Wellington. He participated in the disastrous Walcheren expedition in 1809 and was one of the remnant left of the [illegible] hundred thousand who coped with the French batteries in the Scheldt. He fought in the battles of Victoria and St. Sebastian, was engaged in the rout of the [illegible] of Marshal Soult's army at Toulouse and also fought in the great battle of Waterloo. Mr. McDonald emigrated to Canada in 1833, having been discharged from the army sixteen years before. He settled on a farm near Acton, Ont., where he had lived ever since, except at intervals when he visited some of his numerous descendants. He had seven children, the majority of whom are still living, and leaves a large progeny extending through four generations.

BY PERMISSION WE REFER:

PORTLAND, Or., March 20, 1882.

MR. C. F. PEARSON, PORTLAND, OREGON.

Dear Sir: Your Roofing Composition has been thoroughly tried in this city, and so far as I know has given general satisfaction. From what I know and have seen I believe it to be better and more durable than either tin or asbestos. Very respectfully,

GEO. J. AINSWORTH

Supt. River Division O. R. & N. Co.

PORTLAND, Or., Feb. 4, 1882.

MR. C. F. PEARSON:

Dear Sir: We take this opportunity to express our entire satisfaction with your roofing composition that has been on our roof for the last five years. We cheerfully recommend your invention as being the best thing we know of for a roof. Respectfully yours,

MR. C. F. PEARSON:

Dear Sir: I take great pleasure in being able to say that I consider your Roofing Composition a first class article for the purpose for which it is intended and that it possesses all qualities claimed for it, and I can heartily recommend it to those having need for such an article. Very respectfully,

R. H. THOMPSON.

PORTLAND, Or., Feb. 24, 1882.

MR. C. F. PEARSON:

Dear Sir: Allow me to testify my appreciation of your durable roofing composition. As this steamer was placed on the opposition line last summer it was roughly used by the passenger travel. It did not injure it at all. Had it been a tin or any other kind of roof it would have required repair, if not entirely spoiled. It is now in as good condition without any additional cost as when first put on. Yours respectfully,

JAMES WILSON,

Master O. R. & N. Co.'s Str. Dixie Thompson.

PORTLAND, Or., Feb. 24, 1882.

MR. C. F. PEARSON:

Dear Sir: Notwithstanding our efforts to secure a good roof over our immense stock of goods—we have tried asbestos roof and plain tin roof with all the mechanical skill—we have been [illegible] of goods to thousands of dollars from leaky roofs until we got your roofing composition put over our store. It has given entire satisfaction. Never caused the loss of goods to the value of one cent. It has now been on for years. Very respectfully yours,

Importers of Dry Goods.

OAKLAND, Cal., March 11, 1882.

C. F. PEARSON:

Dear Sir: I have tried your Roofing Composition on several of my houses in Portland, Oregon. They all, so far as I know, have given entire satisfaction. I believe it makes a better roof than tin or asbestos. Respectfully yours,

J. C. AINSWORTH.

We claim it to be superior to anything yet discovered in the shape of a roof, as it will save its cost, even on a new roof, in less than no time.

THE ELECTION.

The count everywhere is extremely slow. No county is yet fully reported. But it is certain that the whole republican state ticket is elected. The majorities will range, in round numbers, from 1000 to 2000; and perhaps on representative in congress the majority may reach 2500. The telegraph lines to Astoria and The Dalles are down, and not one word has been received from either direction, save a single dispatch yesterday about eleven o'clock, when the line was working for a few minutes, stating that in Wasco the republicans had a majority on both state and county tickets.

George's majority is so large that inquiry about it has ceased to be a matter of special interest. Moody's will be 1000 less. West of the mountains Moody will lead Smith by 1500 to 1800; perhaps by 2000. East of the mountains Smith will have a majority, but it will scarcely exceed 700 and may be much less.

The legislature is much more doubtful. Republicans lose two in Washington and two in Clackamas whom they expected to elect. They have elected all in Marion, they seem to have elected all in Yamhill and Polk, and two in Benton. Advices from Douglas are favorable to the election of the entire republican ticket there. Lane is very close, with a chance of one republican senator and one representative. Forty-six members constitute a majority of the legislature on joint ballot. Republicans now count ten in Multnomah, nine in Marion, four in Polk, two in Benton, two in Washington, four in Clackamas, one in Linn, six in Douglas, and five in Yamhill. Total, forty-three, including senators holding over. The counties to hear from, some of which will certainly elect republicans, are Columbia, Clatsop and Tillamook. Wasco and Grant, with a chance in Umatilla. It is possible, however, that upon full returns it may be found that some of those counted above may not be elected. The legislature may be democratic when the full returns are in; yet it may be said that the republicans have a fair chance for it. Loss of members in Washington and Clackamas, two strong republican counties, is a decided set back. But if the report from Wasco be verified the loss will be mainly repaired. There is however too little accurate information to justify positive statements as to the legislature. We may not know the actual result for three or four days more.

OUR MERCHANT MARINE.

A very interesting speech was made by Senator Bayard at New York recently, the occasion being the 114th anniversary of the chamber of commerce of that city. Many have said of Mr. Bayard that although a democrat he could not forget that he came from a ship-building state. This in a measure is true; and yet the views expressed by Mr. Bayard can scarcely be thought acceptable to the subsidy-shipbuilders of his state. He cannot be a protectionist who holds the view that our country must be considered as one of a great family of nations with duties of mutuality and reciprocity of obligations and dependent conditions. "Commerce," he says, "is not, and cannot be, a selfish pursuit by an individual or a nation. Its wisest and most beneficent basis is its reciprocity of benefit, and that there must be buying as well as selling, and giving as well as taking; and that it is not in the nature of commerce to enrich one party at the cost of the other, for the impoverishment of his correspondent will be also the destruction of the trader himself. Nor can any man or nation take pay in money only, but in such descriptions of property as are most profitable for his neighbor to pay him with, so that the exchanges shall inure to the advantage of both." This is not a protection idea. Selfishness is the basis of that theory, and it is even proclaimed as a national duty by its adherents. Perhaps Mr. Bayard is not so satisfactory to the tariff reformers when he leaves general principles to discuss special considerations, and here, if anywhere, tenderness for his home industry comes to the surface. He says "it is also obviously reasonable and just that, before a completed ship is admitted free of taxation to American register, the various materials which enter into her construction should be allowed by law to be purchased and brought in equally free of tax by the American shipbuilder, for whom I would ask neither protection nor subsidy, but simply that a premium should not be paid to his foreign rival by discriminating in favor of foreign labor when combined with material in the shape of a finished vessel, while heavily taxing the materials when disconnected from that labor. Do not abolish shipbuilding skill in America because you want cheaper ships—the remedy would be worse than the disease. It is not by subsidies—it is not by protection—but by unwearied exertion, unshaken perseverance, careful economies and manly self-reliance that great and lasting results are accomplished in anything." If Mr. Bayard has any lingering affection for our navigation laws, which are as unique as they are absurd, he is stopping this side of the full measure of condemnation of our present hopelessly discriminating system that he ought to commit himself to; yet if congress would go as far as he indicates all other parts of the question would soon find their own solution. His point against subsidies is thoroughly unequivocal and is a splendid stroke at the main iniquity which is found under the maze of propositions to stimulate the shipbuilding interests of the country. If we regard him as inclined to over-cautiousness on the one hand, we are not in the least afraid, on the other, that he will give jobbers his consent to make their raids upon the treasury.

The scheme to flood the great Sahara desert, proposed some time ago, is receiving a good deal of attention in Europe. At a recent meeting in Paris to consider the project there were present M. de Freycinet, Messieurs Varroy, Say and De Lesseps and Gen. Billot. These gentlemen constitute the extra parliamentary committee appointed to consider the scheme, the design of which is to create an inland sea on a portion of the desert by which that vast tract of blistering waste land can be made fertile and productive. M. de Lesseps opposed the theory that by flooding part of the Sahara a large number of valuable oases would be destroyed. The loss on that score he estimated at only 400,000f ($80,000), represented by 4000 palm trees. Gen. Faye informed the committee that the salt marshes were very fertile, and only needed water to render them exceedingly productive. The members formed themselves into three sub-committees—the first, to which M. de Lesseps belongs, being appointed to study the question from a technical and engineering point of view. The second will examine the physical, climatic and hygienic conditions of the undertaking, while the other will devote itself to the political and commercial aspect of the question. If these sub-committees should make a favorable report another committee will be appointed to decide as to whether the government or the general public shall foot the bills.

Now that Guiteau, in the abject cowardice of his spirit, is sinking under the base fear of his approaching doom, it will be in order for all the sentimentalists to rise up with the exclamation that it would be a national shame to drag the shrinking, cowering wretch to the gallows. It is probable that he will be unable to support himself. Quaking with fear he will be carried to the place of execution and held up while the hangman prepares to do his office. This is not a spectacle to be pleased with, but it is often presented upon the execution of murderers. If excessive suffering from fear be part of the punishment, so much the better.

NEW METHODS IN POLITICS.

In a prominent London publication an article attributed to the direct inspiration of Bismarck recently appeared, which represents that the old political dynastic issues which have for so many centuries convulsed Europe have been practically exhausted; that all the old forces of society have lost, or are losing, their hold upon mankind; that the nations, though armed to the teeth, have no longer any confidence in armament; that to govern on the old lines is impossible; that to waste the resources of statesmanship on the barren issues of politics, or of frontiers, is suicidal; that the solution of the social problem is the task on which the whole energies of the state should be concentrated; and that the sovereigns and statesmen of Europe should lay aside their petty differences, and devote themselves to the task of ameliorating the condition of their people.

No sentiments ever attributed to the chief statesman of Germany, and of Europe, ever more strikingly illustrated his clearness of political vision than these. Government on the old lines is indeed out of date, and the amelioration of the condition of the people is indeed the chief governmental question. Perceiving this, Bismarck has been devoting himself sedulously, of late years, to the solution of certain industrial and economic problems, and has brought forward certain elaborate measures which seem to him adapted to disarm socialism, to mitigate the hardships of labor, and to eradicate discontent among the middle and laboring classes. Whatever the intrinsic merit or demerit of these measures may be, they are in one respect wise and beneficial. They disclose a sincere endeavor to govern on new lines—not the lines of military compulsion and conquest, not the ambitious and embroiling lines of diplomatic interference and intrigue, but the upward-leading, and peace-developing lines of social and economical improvement. Prince Bismarck realizes, in short, that the richest prince, and the happiest ruler, is he who can say, like Wurtemberg's Eberhard of old, that he has no subject upon whose breast he may not safely repose.

It is an auspicious omen that any great ruler on the other side of the Atlantic realizes the necessity of governing in this spirit and of reducing the task of government by making the people happier and better. Such seems to be the regime which Gladstone has lately endeavored to introduce in Ireland, and which Ireland sadly needs. In Germany there is no such state of affairs as exists in Ireland, for the German peasantry are politically and economically more independent than the Irish peasantry, but neither in Germany nor in any other country, or under any other system of government, is it inexpedient to introduce the new lines of political policy which Bismarck proposes for all Europe. It is the first and most pressing duty, now, of all administrations, whether monarchical or republican to adjust their lines of policy with a view to ameliorating the condition of the people they govern, and so reach the only enduring solution of the social problem.

In this country, yet in the early dawn of its material and political development, these questions are now thrusting themselves forward, and will perpetually present themselves in a multitude of new and varying forms. The political party that succeeds must be prepared to govern at each emergency on lines that will be new and untried, but always parallel with the one central idea, not of the greatest good to the greatest number, but of the greatest good to all. If the old monarchies can no longer stand still, and no longer govern on the old lines, much less can we. But there must be this distinctive quality in our ameliorating policy, and that is, that it shall be self-helping, and not paternal. It is the business of a republican government not so much to improve the people, as to give the people a chance to improve themselves, and thereby secure a better government, as well as a better state of society.

In several counties where the republicans have large majorities they have lost members of the legislature. The loss is due to several causes, namely, personal feuds, local questions and Hipple-Mitchell. These sources of disturbance concurring in several places, and each of them aggravating the others, the local tickets suffered in consequence. It was bad policy on the part of the followers of the polyonomous statesman, but quite characteristic of their selfish methods, to push him forward. The forcing process that accompanied it was met by a natural resistance, and the result was a dissension which helped the democrats to slip some of their own candidates in. The republican party of Marion county has been distracted throughout the contest by the effort made in the primaries to commit the county to Mitchell. Though the effort failed, it became the source of bitter contention which made it hard to carry the candidates through. In Clackamas county there was a similar effort, and the consequence was a similar disturbance of the harmony of the party, which is now followed by the election of democrats to the legislature. Apperson and his coadjutors are not seconded in their eager effort in behalf of Mitchell by the republicans of Clackamas. It is not probable that there will ever again be harmony in the republican party of Oregon till Hipple-Mitchell changes his name once more and departs for some other country, or till his followers become finally convinced that it is useless to try to force him any more on the republicans of the state.

On the 22d of May, the Utah Mormons voted to adopt a state constitution, casting twenty thousand votes for it. Less than one hundred votes were cast against the proposed constitution, the gentiles paying no attention to the election. Yesterday a convention was held at Salt Lake and selected delegates to go to Washington with a copy of this constitution and apply for admission to the Union. This sort of thing is not going to do the Mormons any service. A Mormon territory has been disgraceful enough to this country; there can never be a Mormon state. The Mormons must first accommodate themselves to the ruling ideas of the marital relation before their territory can be ranked among the free and equal states of the Union. The American people will never consent to political fellowship with a community which approves the prostitution of women under the cover of religious fanaticism.

The gentiles at Salt Lake are making wry faces and the saints are smiling quietly over Mr. Oscar Wilde's parting remarks at New York, relative to his audience at the Mormon capital. The gentle Wilde put it thus: "The most unintellectual audience I had was in Salt Lake. The Mormons are the most unintellectual people I have met in America, because they have the worst physiques I have seen; and a people must have good physiques in order even to comprehend art." The reason why the gentiles groan and the saints snicker, is that not more than six or eight of the large audience were Mormons, the languishing gentiles having turned out en masse.

In Marion county the election is over, but Col. Napoleon Bonaparte Knight, it is said, continues the exercises by singing:

Oh! when I think of what I am
And what I used to was,
I fear I've throwed myself away
Without sufficient cause.

A LADY

SAYS:

"THE OVAL CAKE"

Is revolutionizing the Soap Trade. Housekeepers who once try it never again go back to the wasteful, adulterated and incompletely pressed styles heretofore in use. The advantages of

[illegible]

Over all other Laundry Soaps are:

1st. It is the only Soap molded by STEAM pressure, and consequently contains more soap and less water to the pound than the old style hand-pressed soaps.

2d. The Oval Cake does not, like the other styles, wash away in using to a thin piece which crumbles and is wasted, but it wears down to a thick lump, which you can stick a fork into and use entirely up.

3d. It contains no adulteration whatever.

4th. It is the handsomest, most convenient to handle, most economical, and (considering its superior quality) the cheapest Washing Soap ever made.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 7, 1882

CITY.

ABOUT THE WEATHER.—It is remarkable that whenever there is a variation from the customary equable climate of the Willamette valley, either towards heat or towards cold, such change never lasts. We are given only a taste of biting New England winters and sweltering New York summers—probably to teach us that we often lose sight of our climatic advantages. The last hot spell was no exception to the rule. It was evident that the sun traveled with the hat down, as steamboatmen say, and went under full stroke from the time she left the eastern horizon until she sank in the sea. Sunday evening, about eight, when ice cream had given out, and twenty-five cents a pound was offered for ice and refused, and everybody was burdened with the thought of to-morrow's heat, the ocean breeze sprang up—one of those deliciously soothing zephyrs, worth a dollar and six bits a head to every man, woman and child in Portland. Those who passed the evening on steps and verandahs found before bed time that wraps were not uncomfortable, and later that blankets could not be discarded. Monday came, a pleasant morning and a cloudy afternoon, and then, after tea, just the gentlest, nicest, most gratifying little rainfall in the world. What a sweet lullaby it sang! With what joyousness the hot earth drank the refreshing drops! How many, many thousand dollars was added to the wealth of Oregon's growing crops! With what elasticity men Tuesday morning— There were about twelve pages more of this same sort, but the local editor ran his blue pencil through them and told the young man that THE OREGONIAN wanted news, not fine writin', and asked him to find out whether Dan Sprague had been elected constable in Morrison precinct.

LITERARY LECTURES.—Mrs. F. Williams, of San Francisco, whose afternoon lectures in this city have attracted wide attention, has been asked to give a series of evening lectures and has consented. The course will consist of four lectures, the first to be given to-morrow evening at the Unitarian chapel; subject, "Auguste Compte." The second, subject, "John Stuart Mill," will be given Saturday evening; the third, subject, "Herbert Spencer," on Tuesday evening; and the fourth, subject not yet determined, within a few days following. It is the opinion of many that Portland has not heard another lecturer so gifted as Mrs. Williams. Certainly she possesses rare faculty of analysis and discrimination, and rare force as a speaker. Tickets for the course may be secured at Gill's.

AMATEUR DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT.—The first entertainment of the Rising Star Literary and Dramatic Society will be given this evening at Turn Halle. One of the features of the evening will be the mirth-provoking, side-splitting Irish farce entitled "Maloney's Birthday." The following are among the gentlemen named to appear: Wm F. Dugan, W. F. McNamara, C. Maloney, R. J. Dooling, E. Hauley, Jos. Hughes, Jas Kelly, Ed. Kelly, Jas. Berger and Jas. Kennedy. The programme presented is first class in every respect, and the entertainment well worth attending.

THE STEAMERS.—The Oregon arrived here at four o'clock yesterday morning. The Astoria line was down yesterday until eight P. M., and only election news was received after that hour. Hence no news of the Columbia's crossing out.

EXAMINATION.—The annual examinations at the Bishop Scott Grammar School began Monday and will continue during the whole week. The examinations are public and all are invited to attend. The session is from 9 to 1 o'clock.

SIX HUNDRED MORE.—The British steamer Annerly arrived at Greenwich dock yesterday and discharged 600 Chinamen. She brought 150 more, which go to San Francisco. The steamer sails hence this morning.

RESIGNED.—Mr. Scott Sweetland the popular purser of the "Washington" during the past year, has resigned his position to engage in other business. He will go to Eastern Oregon.

POSTPONED.—The picnic excursion, which was to have been given next Sunday by the Young Men's Hebrew Association of this city, has been postponed.

BRIEF MENTION.

Regular council meeting to-night.

Col. J. W. Nesmith of Derry, Polk county, is in the city.

Mr. John Miller Murphy of the Olympia Standard was in the city yesterday and left for Walla Walla.

Mr. S. Lipman, head of the house of S. Lipman & Co., arrived with his family by the Oregon. He will remain here several weeks.

Patents have been granted to Wm. R. McCord of East Portland for a fish wheel, and to Wm. O. Griffin of Victoria for artificial fuel.

Capt. B. H. Lamson, clerk of the U. S. courts, has returned from Yamhill county, somewhat improved in health. He will leave in a few days for the hot springs on the Mackenzie river.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

ASTORIA, June 5.—The body of Adolph Christiansen was found to-day near Skipanon creek and brought up in a fishing boat. An inquest was begun and as marks of violence were evident and his money gone, the inquest adjourned pending an investigation till Wednesday. He was a Knight of Pythias and a member of the fire department. These bodies attended his funeral in uniform this afternoon.

SHEET MUSIC.

Simon Harris has the largest stock in the state. The only place where you can get brass and string band music. Catalogues mailed free.

NATIONAL WASHING POWDERS.

These powders are labor saving, and they thoroughly cleanse clothing without damage to goods or the hands. Many ladies of Portland and elsewhere can testify to its merits. Other powders of inferior make are being sold by unscrupulous solicitors. National powders make washing easy, cleansing the clothes without washing or boiling, and saves wear, time and labor. For sale at all the grocery stores. Manufactured by Mrs. Fellows and Mrs. Bell, Fifth street, near Jefferson.

THE ELECTION.

Every Candidate on the Republican County Ticket Elected.

Following are returns from Multnomah county as far as counted. North Portland's count will be finished by 7 o'clock this morning, and Morrison by evening. The lowest candidate on the ticket will have more than 400 majority.

The Extreme Southern Counties.

JACKSONVILLE, June 6.—Democratic majorities on the state ticket will not exceed 350. Fenton's will be about 250. The whole democratic county ticket is elected.

Partial returns from Josephine indicate that Thornton (rep.) may be elected to the legislature by a very close vote, but returns are insufficient to to decide county tickets in Josephine. Both in doubt.

Lake not heard from.

Notes from Various Quarters.

Dispatches from Dallas reports all of the Republican Representatives elected.

George's majority in Multnomah is 1,500, and may reach 1,800. Moody's will be up to 1,600.

In Washington the Republican State ticket has nearly 300 majority. In Clackamas it has 175 to 200.

Up to four o'clock yesterday morning Moody was reported forty-five ahead on the count at the Dalles.

In Linn the Democratic majorities on the State ticket are, Fenton, 190, Smith, 250. Democratic Legislative 150 majority. County ticket 150.

The Republicans elect one Representative, (Sappington,) in Washington county. Humphreys is beaten by about 70, and Tucker by about 30 or 40.

In Clackamas county the Republicans lose the Senator and one Representative, and elect three Representatives. Myers, Democrat, is elected Senator by 50 majority over Apperson.

HIS ASSOCIATES LIKE THE NEWS.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Representative George, of Oregon, was warmly congratulated to-day by his republican associates upon his re-election. Mr. George is the first member elect to the 48th congress and he is the only representative from that state elected for two terms since Oregon was admitted into the union. This morning Congressman Hubbell, chairman of the congressional campaign committee, received a telegram from Mr. J. B. Montgomery, a citizen of Portland, saying that George had run ahead of his ticket and would be elected by a handsome majority. Later in the day Mr. George received the following telegram:

PORTLAND, Or., June 6.

Hon. M. C. George, Washington: Multnomah will give you 1500 majority; the state probably 2500.
(Signed), SOL HIRSCH.

THIS SAVES THE LEGISLATURE.

ROSEBURG, June 7.—1 A. M.—Republicans carry the county on the state and legislative ticket from one to two hundred majority except for state treasurer. Abrahams runs two hundred or more ahead of his ticket.

Just what effect the light rains for two days will have cannot be estimated, but is generally believed that they will cut no figure in the floods. A study of the table given below, taken with the personal knowledge every reader may have of the snow in the mountains, will enable him to decide for himself just how high the water will come this year.

The highest point reached in 1876, was 28.2 feet, June 24; and in 1880, 27 feet at midnight July 3.

COMPARATIVE HEIGHT OF WATER.

The following table, taken from the records in the office of Capt. Chas. F. Powell, U. S. engineer, shows the height of water at the Stark street gauge every day in June for the past six years. Results are given in feet and tenths.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 7, 1882.

FORFEITS.

They sent him round the circle fair,
To bow before the prettiest there.
I'm bound to say the choice he made
A creditable taste displayed;
Although I can't say what it meant
The little maid looked ill content.

His task was then anew begun
To kneel before the wittiest one.
Once more that little maid sought he,
And went him down upon his knee.
She bent her eyes upon the floor—
I think she thought the game a bore.

He circled then—his sweet behest
To kiss the one he loved the best.
For all she frowned, for all she cried,
He kissed that little maid beside
And then—though why I can't decide—
The little maid looked satisfied.

H. C. Bunner in the Century.

SWEETS TO THE SWEET.

"Sweets to the sweet," he softly said,
As bending o'er lovely head,
He proffered her a flower—
"And may I dare to hope, with this
You'll give me just one little kiss
In memory of the hour?"

"You think 'twould be a fair exchange?"
Said she. "How boundless is the range
Of man's incurbed conceit!
And if I do as you propose
In barter for this lovely rose,
I'd give 'sweets to the sweet?'"

"I meant not that," quite growing red,
"I only meant—just what I said
And not the thing you make it."
"Beg pardon, then, but still," she quoth,
"I must not give it, though you're wroth,
But, may be, you can take it."

BEHIND MINERVA'S SHIELD.

Our Continent.

Homer Ashton, one autumn evening, listened to stories of witches and ghosts told around him, and joined in them until he felt an occasional shiver creeping down his back. Not that he believed in the supernatural, but the firelight into which he sat looking grew pleasanter to him than the corners of the great room, for lamps had been banished to accord with the subject under discussion, and it seemed that the shadows flickering behind the young people grouped about the grate of blazing coal, were massive and wierd, and that when one glanced at them sideways suddenly, there was something about them like ghostly visitors. When he faced them, to be sure, they were only ordinary shadows. Homer was ashamed of himself, he was afraid his nerves were unsteady, and resolved to test them. He knew a way to do it.

Near the place at which he was staying, an English country house, were the ruins of the older part of a castle said to have been built in the time of the Crusades. The whole castle was at present uninhabited, but the part which had been allowed to fall into hopeless decay was the width of the courtyard away from the rest of the house. Probably it had once been connected with it by buildings which had formed three sides of a hollow square, but if so, it had been left out in the changes made at different times, and now it was roofless, the walls were crumbled, and the underground portion was all that made any pretense to a habitation, and offered a suitable home to the unearthly beings who were said to room in it, for a dampness covered all the stones and the air had a deadly chill. But these facts seemed conclusions from the nature of things rather than the results of observations, for Homer could not find anybody who had explored it.

Ghosts ought really to be forgiven a good many faults, because they are in general so unselfish about selecting homes nobody else wants.

That evening, as Ashton connected the reports of the place itself with stories of sights and sounds around it, he found himself yielding so much to the influence of gossip that he determined to shake off the weakness and to try what stuff he was made of. He would stand in these haunted halls and summon the ghosts and see what would happen. He knew well enough that it would be nothing.

But he did not tell his plan to the others; he said merely that he was going for a walk to blow away this ghostly atmosphere by a little fresh air. Nobody volunteered to accompany him. Night had never seemed more distasteful to them all. They only looked at each other significantly as he left them, and said:

"Another Americanism."

There is an unreasoning element in human nature which assumes every individuality of a foreigner to be a national characteristic. Dr. Ashton, whom the son of the house had become acquainted with in London and brought home with him for a visit, was to his entertainers an epitome of America, and it must be confessed that at the end of a week they had come to have a good opinion of that country.

As Homer walked on rapidly he saw an occasional star in the sky, but it seemed as if he never could get out of the shadow of the trees, there were so many of them.

He soon came to the ruin a mile away, he opened the heavy gate and began to descend the long flight of steps leading into the corridors and rooms underground. What could the old place have been used for? Did monks come here for prayers or penances, or were these dungeons where captives taken in the petty warfares of those times felt the personal vengeance of their captors? He thought of the one described in "Ivanhoe," into which Isaac the Jew was thrown—dark, damp, hung with chains and shackles, and where, in the ring of one set of fetters were two mouldering human bones. It was no wonder the ghosts were said to haunt a place like that.

In the midst of these thoughts the gate he had left open swung to with a clang, shutting out earthly things behind him. Step by step he went down the stone stairs into blackness to which the night outside was twilight. Sometimes he seemed to hear a sound, but when he stopped to listen it was the beating of his heart. When he reached the foot of the stairs he still went on; every now and then his outstretched hands struck against a wall or pillar, for he was passing through an arched hall that ended in a narrow passage. He next entered what he thought must be a large room, for the air had an indefinable difference, and the blackness seemed that of space instead of substance. As he stood there, uncertain which way to move and the very echo of his footsteps ceased, the horror of darkness and silence which had been growing upon him reached its height. He tried to utter his challenge, but his dry lips would give forth no sound, an abyss of night seemed to swallow him up.

Suddenly he fancied he heard a movement, he thought that something like palpable blackness flitted about him. He turned to fly and took a few hurried steps in the direction of the entrance. Then he stopped. It was no ghostly presence that arrested him, but the iron hand of his resolution; he had come here to do a certain thing and was not to be cowed by a feeling which he would be ashamed to own to himself in the daylight. He faced about and went forward quickly a few steps.

"If there is any ghost let him now appear," he called loudly.

The dreary walls answered his cry with dull reverberation.

With arms folded he stood a moment—the hardest thing of all to do—awaiting results. If there had not been a roar in his ear, if the beating of his heart had not made even his vision unsteady, he would have said that he heard subdued laughter, or moaning, it was impossible to tell which as the sound rolled toward him from the hollow sides, and that he saw something like whiteness in the distance, while a sense of presence made him cold with horror.

He had done all that he had resolved to do and was free to get out of this dreadful place. He hurried toward the entrance, urged on by the reasoning sense of pursuit that comes over one when he turns his back upon danger. And all at once he lost footing and lay at full length upon the slippery floor; the shock, however, only jarred and bewildered him. As he put out his hands to rise he touched something from which he drew back instantly with a stifled exclamation; he thought it must be one of the reptiles likely to be crawling in this den. But he recollected that it was small and hard, perhaps it was a curious stone which would prove his night's excursion if the strangers he was with should be tempted to doubt it. After a little groping he found it again; it felt like a stone with slimy moisture, and putting it into his pocket he made his way out of the ruins as best he could.

When he returned to the house his friend was alone waiting for him, and sleepy, as Homer could see, consequently a little annoyed at his having kept up so late. The guest said nothing that night of where he had been.

In his room he took out the stone. It was not a pebble or a piece of the pavement, as he had supposed, but an oval of [illegible] that had once been a brooch or part of a bracelet. As he cleared it with his [illegible] handkerchief he saw that the [illegible] was beautiful; it was a figure of Minerva [illegible] folds in her robe carefully [illegible] and as he saw by his magnifying glass, with a light tracery of carving on her helmet and shield. On the opposite side just under the shield was the word "Violet."

It was evidently the owner's name, but who was she? The pin, if it were a pin, had not lain in its last hiding place long, he thought, it was not enough stained by the dampness, yet he was not sure about that. "Violet" might belong to a former generation, or might have been sleeping the sleep of the just for a century. But suppose not, suppose she was a young lady beautiful as her name, wealthy and [illegible]. Well, what then?

Homer put out his light and went to bed, but not immediately to sleep. The affair seemed to promise an adventure as such it would have been interesting to any young person. But Ashton, in addition to being barely 30, had been obliged to make his way for the last ten years, for, though he was of good family, Dame Fortune had started him in life with no more than one of her pennies which, however, every true man turns, as in the legend, leaves a gold piece in his hand.

The next morning but one, a tall young man with dark hair and eyes, and an expression amused yet resolute, handed in his card at Grantham Hall and asked to see its owner, Sir Gresham Laud.

"Dr. Homer Ashton," cried Sir Gresham, looking up from his letters, displeased at the interruption. "Who's he? I don't know any such person, Beryl," to the servant, "what does he look like?"

"A swell, Sir Gresham, only sprucer."

"Oh, 'sprucer' is he? In his head or his heels, I wonder? Well, I suppose I must see what the fellow wants; one of these genteel sponges come to suck up as many pounds as I'll give to their deuced charities," he muttered. By which speech it is fair to conclude that Sir Gresham had been sponged in this way more than once.

But when Homer, who was admiring the view from the drawing-room window, turned and bowed as the baronet approached, Sir Gresham perceived nothing of the supplicant about him, and began to doubt whether this elegant stranger did mean to make him a few pounds the poorer by his visit. He came forward and requested his visitor to be seated. Ashton spoke of the beauty of the country and Sir Gresham answered him; but at that moment curiosity was his ruling passion.

"You are wondering why I came," said Homer. "Certainly it was not to tell you what everybody knows—that this is the finest situation about here. But I have in my possession part of an ornament which I believe, belongs to Miss Laud."

"Ah! What is it?"

Ashton bowed and smiled also, as he handed the other his discovery of the night but one before. "Does it belong to your daughter?" he said.

But Sir Gresham was too bewildered to answer him.

"That?" he cried. "Good Heavens! Where did you find it? It's a clue!"

"A clue to what?" cried Homer eagerly. He felt on the brink of discovering how a lady's ornament could come in so strange a place.

But Sir Gresham was too excited by some suggestion awakened by the sight of the stone to have an idea of trying to satisfy any curiosity but his own.

"Where did you find it?" he repeated.

"Is it your daughter's?" returned Homer.

"Yes, it must be hers?" and remembering at last to thank the young man for returning it, he stood with the stone in his hand waiting impatiently for a full account of its recovery.

"Does Sir Gresham Laud suppose that I came here for the purpose of telling a midnight adventure to him?" thought Homer, as a look of amusement flitted across his face. "If you will be so kind," he answered, suavely, "as to ask Miss Laud if she will do me the favor to identify her ornament, I shall be most happy to tell you, and her, if she cares to know, how I came by it."

Sir Gresham hesitated only an instant. "Assuredly," he said, and sent for his daughter.

The young man's heart beat faster at the sound of light steps behind him. Suppose Violet were plain and heavy-looking, yet suppose—he turned hastily, but not too soon for the beautiful face that was coming toward him. "She was named for her eyes," thought Homer; and there was something else he thought, too, but no more could be spoken at the moment. She greeted him with a simplicity that charmed him, but when she saw the medallion in her father's hand she cried:

"Oh, papa, my bracelet clasp; where did you get it? Have they found out the robbers?"

Homer's eyes opened wide at her last words.

"Robbers?" he repeated. "That's it, then? Perhaps I really did hear and see something after all?" And after a moment, in which three people stood facing each other with looks of inquiry, he began an account of his expedition to the ruin. He was truthful in every detail, yet the story sounded remarkably well as he told it, watching Violet's face and seeing her shiver and grow pale in imagining the blackness of the old cellars. If she would but "love him for the dangers he had passed;" he knew nothing of wars, to be sure, except of personal struggles with misfortune, out of place to be told here, yet having left their mark upon him in a consciousness of power to dare and conquer adverse circumstances.

"I've no doubt they carried their booty there," cried Sir Gresham, his thoughts still in the ruins an infinite distance behind the young man's winged fancy, and supplementing the narrative which Ashton had just finished. While Violet was listening to her father's account of a daring burglary committed the winter before while the family were in the house, Ashton had an opportunity to study her face more critically, or rather, more admiringly. It was possible he did not drop all the admiration out of his expression as from time to time she turned to him to explain more fully something that her father was saying.

"I've no doubt the villains bring their booty miles to hide in the ruin," said Sir Gresham. "This medallion was the clasp of a heavy gold bracelet. It was given to my daughter by a friend, and she is much obliged to you, I am sure, for finding it."

"Indeed I am," said Violet, coloring a little as she spoke.

"It is I who am under obligation to fate," answered Homer; "I have found something that Miss Laud values."

"The rest of this bracelet has been melted down long ago," pursued Sir Gresham. "That place ought to be searched."

"Yes," said Homer, "when will you do it?"

The baronet looked somewhat taken back at this energetic suggestion.

"No doubt," he answered, "and perhaps Dr. Ashton, you would like to be one of the party if I go with some of my neighbors? I suppose it ought to be done as soon as possible, within a day or two," he went on, as the other assented, "lest they should take alarm at your intrusion upon them?"

"When should you advise going?"

"This moment," cried Homer. "It's a wonder that we Americans have any grass in our country," he added, smiling, "we are so averse to letting it grow under our feet."

Homer met Violet's eyes as he finished, and read in them an admiration and interest. In another moment she had turned away on some trifling pretext, but, undoubtedly, she was blushing. How was Homer to know that she had once declared she would marry the man who brought her back her bracelet clasp? That, however, was when she was quite sure it would never be found.

"Not until after luncheon, papa, will you?" she said. "You'd better not take Dr. Ashton until after that."

Several years later, when the medallion had led to more than the finding of stores of plunder in the old ruins which a gang of thieves had taken care to make appear haunted, Homer Ashton, a physician of high standing, was living in a large American city. A schoolmate whom he had not met for years said to him one day at dinner as they were talking of marriage and death among their former comrades:

"By the way, Ashton, you never told me where you first met your wife. I only know that it was in England."

He laughed.

"I first met her," he said, "behind Minerva's shield. Did I not, Violet?"

ANNUAL MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE OREGON Railway and Navigation Company:

You are hereby notified that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company will be held at the office of the company at Portland, Oregon, on Monday, June 19th, 1882, at eleven o'clock A. M., and you are further notified that at said meeting, in pursuance of a resolution duly passed at a regular meeting of the board of directors of said company held May 20, 1882, the following resolution, authorizing the filing of supplementary articles of incorporation of this company, will be submitted for the action of the stockholders, namely:

Resolved, That the directors of this company be, and are hereby instructed and directed to file as soon as they can be reasonably prepared and executed, supplementary articles of incorporation, amending Article III of the present articles of this company by inserting at the end of subdivision VII of Article III, of the original articles, the following subdivision:

VIII. To construct and equip the following railroad and telegraph lines, namely:

First. A line from the city of Walla Walla, in Washington Territory, in a generally north-easterly direction to Snake River, at or near Texas Ferry, and thence following the Valley of the Snake River to Lewiston, in Idaho Territory, with a branch from a point on said line about three miles south of Grange City in a generally easterly direction to the said city of Lewiston.

Second. A line from the said city of Walla Walla to the town of Pendleton, in the County of Umatilla, in the State of Oregon.

Third. A line from a junction with the present railroad of the company between The Dalles and Umatilla, in the state of Oregon, at a point at or near the mouth of John Day's river, up the valley of said river a distance of about ninety miles to the headwaters of said river, with a branch from said line, from a point at or near the mouth of Rock Creek, up the valley of said Rock Creek, to a point about thirty miles south from the mouth thereof.

EXECUTORS' SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF JAMES Keyes, deceased.—Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an order of sale, duly made by the county court of the state of Oregon for Benton county, on the 7th day of January, 1879, at the regular January term of said court, and duly entered in the journal of said court, directing and commanding us, D. C. Clark and David L. Keyes, executors of the last will and testament of James Keyes, deceased, to sell at public auction all the right, title, interest and estate that said James Keyes, deceased, had at the time of his death in and to the following described real property, situated, lying and being in Multnomah county, Oregon, and more particularly described upon the plat of Holladay's addition to the town of East Portland in said county and state aforesaid, as block No. sixty-five, containing and embracing eight full lots and being numbered lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8; also Nos. five (5), six (6), seven (7), and eight (8), in block forty-nine in Holladay's addition to the city of East Portland, in the county of Multnomah, state of Oregon, being the east half of said block as laid down and described on the map or plat of said addition; also the following lots: One (1), two (2), seven (7) and eight (8) in block No. twenty-four (24) in what is known as Holladay's addition to East Portland, Oregon, and adjacent to the city of East Portland, county of Multnomah and state of Oregon.

And in accordance with and in pursuance of said order of sale, we, D. C. Clark and David L. Keyes, executors of the last will and testament of James Keyes, deceased, will on Saturday, June 10, 1882, at the hour of 1 o'clock P. M. of said day, in front of the court house door, in the city of Portland, in Multnomah county, state of Oregon, sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, all the right, title, interest and estate which the said James Keyes, deceased, had at the time of his death, in or to the above described premises, together with the appurtenances thereunto belonging.

OVER THE RIVER.

Over the river they beckon to me,
Loved ones who've crossed to the further side;
The gleam of their snowy robes I see,
But their voices are lost in the dashing tide;
There's one with ringlets of sunny gold,
And eyes the reflection of heaven's own blue;
He crossed in the twilight, gray and cold,
And the pale mist hid him from mortal view.
We saw not the angels who met him there,
The gates of the city we could not see,
Over the river—over the river—
My brother stands waiting to welcome me.

Over the river the boatman pale
Carried another, the household pet;
Her brown curls waved in the gentle gale,
Darling Minnie! I see her yet,
She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands,
And fearlessly entered the phantom bark;
We felt it glide from the silver sands,
And all our sunshine grew strangely dark.
We know she is safe on the further side,
Where all the ransomed and angels be;
Over the river—the mystic river—
My childhood's idol is waiting for me.

For none return from those quiet shores
Who cross with the boatman cold and pale;
We hear the dip of the golden oars,
And catch a gleam of the snowy sail;
And lo! they have passed from our yearning hearts,
Who cross the stream and are gone for aye,
We may not sunder the veil apart,
That hides from our vision the gates of day;
We only know that their barques no more
May sail with us over life's stormy sea;
Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore,
They watch, and beckon, and wait for me.

And I sit and think when the sunset's gold
Is flushing river and hill and shore,
I shall one day stand by the water cold,
And list for the sound of the boatman's oar;
I shall watch for a gleam of the flapping sail,
I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand,
I shall pass from sight with the boatman pale,
To the better shore of the spirit land;
I shall know the loved who have gone before,
And joyfully sweet will the meeting be,
When over the river—the peaceful river—
The angel of death shall carry me.

THE WORLD'S TIMBER SUPPLY.

How Apparently Inexhaustible Forests have been Cut, and what Still Remains.

From the New York Commercial Bulletin.

The substitution of iron for wood in many branches of manufacture, more especially in the case of iron vessels and sleepers for railroads, has by no means curtailed the world's demand for timber. The multifarious uses of wood, the vast amount of building that is going on in all civilized countries, to say nothing of the rapid multiplication of all kinds of factories, bring us face to face with the question, Is the wood supply sufficient for prospective requirements? The United States and Canada, as is well known, have been the greatest shippers of American lumber of late years, but the time was when as many as 900 cargoes of timber were annually loaded at Memel for Great Britain alone. Not only is the demand increasing, but, what is the most serious feature of the situation, forests are rapidly disappearing, and thus far no efficacious steps have been taken in any country to renew them. Sweden and Norway were one time regarded as inexhaustible sources of supply. All the great forests there were bought up by English merchants and contractors, and now these countries have partly to draw their supplies from further north, and import their oak from Poland. Northern Russia, which was at one time an immense forest all the way from the Baltic to the Ural mountains, has increased its cuttings so rapidly that St. Petersburg even has to bring its heavy lumber now from the center of the empire. The once great forests of Finland also are almost cleared away. The forests along the Vistula and the Nieman, which may be considered as the sources of supply for the great Memel trade, have receded, we are told, to such an extent that it is difficult to fill orders at Koenigsberg, Tilsit and Dantzig. Germany has upward of 30,000,000 acres of forests, Prussia possessing the larger portion; but their value is greatly diminished by the inferior quality of the pine in the northern provinces. Austria had magnificent forests formerly, and there still remains to her 18,349,810 hectares, or half as much more as possessed by Germany. These are mostly in Bohemia, Galicia, and Transylvania, and the fact that they are so far removed from navigation renders them practically unavailable for the European markets. The forests that once covered the eastern shores of the Adriatic are entirely gone. Italy has a considerable extent of forests—in round numbers, 13,000,000 acres; but the difficult nature of the passes in the Alps and Appenines render it impossible to work them to commercial advantage. Spain has some 8,500,000 acres of forests, but the woodman is hampered here also by the nature of the ground. Portugal, with a good seaboard, has no difficulty in getting rid of the small extent of forest land that now remains—that is to say, not more than 1,000,000 acres. Turkey has extensive forests in Roumelia, near Constantinople, and also in various parts of its Asiatic possessions; but the population has been—what Turks proverbially are—destructive, and no provision has been made for systematic replanting. France figures for about 22,000,000 acres of forest. In Great Britain the supply of home wood is simply nil; trees are there chiefly for ornament; while in Ireland impoverished landlords have ruthlessly cut down woods that has served very important meteorological purposes.

Let us now see the export capacity and consumptive needs of the various countries:

	Exports.	Imports.
Norway and Sweden	$16,000,000
Finland	11,000,000
Russia	20,000,000
Austria		Fancy & dye
Germany		woods only.
Holland		$10,000,000
Belgium	580,000	8,800,000
Great Britain		94,000,000
France	6,950,000	55,390,000

The smaller countries import, but generally through England or France. The supply and demand being thus roughly estimated, it may be observed that the cost of tapping the immense forests of Central Africa and America would at once cause a revolution in the present condition of the timber trade.

While the supply of timber in the United States is fully equal to present demand, it is difficult to forsee what may be the increased requirements, domestic and foreign, in the early future. It is very certain that due provision is not made for replanting, and while some states have shown commendable care and energy in that respect, others have been singularly negligent. What, in the course of a few years, will become of the lumber trade of Pensacola, Mobile, and other southern ports, with the present rate of clearing?

In Canada, we observe, the subject is beginning to attract the attention it deserves, and in face of the increasing shipments from St. John, Miramichi, Quebec, and other ports, there is no doubt that even there the supply in the course of a brief time may have to be brought from longer distances. The cargoes in 1881 from St. John, N. B., were 303, and the superficial feet of deals 210,284,730, besides 5152 tons of birch and 1549 of pine. In 1873 only 138,761,000 feet were shipped. From Miramichi 279 vessels were sent out last year with 138,371,000 feet of deals, 1034 tons of birch, 1009 tons of pine, and 3,228,000 pieces of paling. The total shipments of deals from Canadian ports in 1881 were 460,195,905 superficial feet—a decrease, however, from 1880, when 431,655,574 feet were shipped. Our most important source of supply, the great northwest, it is well known, is exposed to improvident methods and reckless waste; and these must ere long lead to a serious depletion of the forests (as they have already led to important climatic changes not always favorable in a sanitary respect), unless some intelligent system is generally adopted not only for arresting further waste, but encouraging replanting. Nature is ever responsive to man's wants, but there is a point at which nature will resent man's wastefulness and neglect.

A hunting dog should be the friend and companion of his master. To keep him chained up from one week to another, is cruelty itself, and I feel for, them as I do for "the prisoners of Chillon," so painfully described by Byron, who raised a monument to his Newfoundland dog with the satirical epitaph, "The only friend he ever had." Sir Walter Scott's constant companion was his staghound "Maida," and in "Guy Mannering" he does not think it beneath him to tell us how Dandie Dinmont broke his terriers. Ulysses, after his years of wanderings, on his return to Penelope to see how her suitors were progressing, was recognized only by his old faithful dog. And Lambro, the pirate, when he revisited "the glimpses of the moon" from the bottom of the sea and obtained admission to the feast presided over by Don Juan and his daughter, did not receive even a nod of recognition from any of the guests save his dog. And where is the sensitive schoolboy who has not shed tears over his book while reading the affecting story of the noble hound 'Gelert.'

Mr. C. L. Divine, superintendent of the [illegible] and printing department of the Indianapolis, Ind., Journal, values the great remedy beyond all [illegible] agents. He has been subject to rheumatism of a very painful character and has passed many sleepless nights while enduring the agony of it. Physicians have prescribed for him, and he has employed remedies which were advertised as specifics for the disease, but none with satisfactory results. When he bought a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, however, and began its use, he speedily realized that he had at last found the remedy he had been looking for. It relieved him with remarkable quickness and gave him great comfort. [illegible] in the knowledge that he has a remedy which will control all rheumatic [illegible] future [illegible] does, that St. Jacobs Oil [illegible] he freely recommends it to his friends and advises its use.

Extent of the Sweep.

(Evening Telegram.)

The grand tidal wave of democratic success which Colonel Effinger predicted would sweep the republican party out of existence because the president vetoed the Chinese bill, has swept a democratic justice of the peace into office in Couch precinct, and there the "sweeping" process has stopped "languid and still."

Homer Ashton [illegible] Its stories of witches and [illegible] him and [illegible] that he [illegible] than the [illegible] with [illegible] that the [illegible] young people [illegible] when [illegible] glanced at them [illegible] there was something [illegible] visitors. When [illegible] were only ordinary [illegible] ashamed of himself [illegible] were unsteady and [illegible] resolved [illegible] knew a way to do it.

Near the place at which [illegible] English country house [illegible] older part of a castle said to [illegible] in the time of the Crusades [illegible] was at present uninhabited. [illegible] which had been allowed to fall into hopeless decay was the width of [illegible] from the rest of the house [illegible] once been connected with it [illegible] which had formed three sides of a [illegible] square but if so it had been left [illegible] changes made at different times and now it was roofless the walls were crumbled and the underground portion was all that made any pretense to a habitation [illegible] home to the unearthly beings who were said to room in it for a dampness covered all the stones and the air had a deadly chill. [illegible] these facts seemed conclusions from the nature of things rather than the results of observations for Homer could not find anybody who had explored it.

Ghosts ought really to be forgiven a good many faults because they are [illegible] unselfish about selecting homes nobody else wants.

That evening as Ashton connected the reports of the place itself with stories of sights and sounds around it he found himself yielding so much to the influence of [illegible] that he determined to shake off the weakness and to try what stuff he was made of. He would stand in these haunted halls and summon the ghosts and see what would happen. He knew well enough that it would be nothing.

But he did not tell his plan to the others. He said merely that he was going for a walk to blow away this ghostly atmosphere by a little fresh air. Nobody volunteered to accompany him. Night had never seemed more distasteful to them all. They only looked at each other significantly as he left them and said "Another Americanism."

There is an unreasoning element in human nature which assumes every individuality of a foreigner to be a national characteristic. Dr. Ashton, whom the son of the house had become acquainted with in London and brought home with him for a visit, was to his entertainers an epitome of America and it must be confessed that at the end of a week they had come to have a good opinion of that country.

As Homer walked on rapidly [illegible] saw an occasional star in the sky but it seemed as if he never could get out of the shadow of the trees, there were so many of them.

He soon came to the ruin a mile away. He opened the heavy gate and began to descend the long flight of steps leading into the corridors and rooms underground. What could the old place have been used for? Did monks come here for prayers or penance? [illegible] these dungeons where captives taken in the petty warfare of those times felt the personal vengeance of their captors? He thought of the one described in "Ivanhoe" into which Isaac the Jew was thrown—dark, damp, hung with chains and shackles, and where in the ruin of one set of fetters were two mouldering human bones. It was no wonder the ghosts were said to haunt a place like this.

In the midst of these thoughts the gate he had left open swung to with a clang, shutting out earthly things behind him. Step by step he went down the stone stairs into [illegible] which the night outside was twilight. Sometimes he seemed to hear a sound, but when he stopped to listen it was the beating of his heart. When he reached the foot of the stairs he still went on, every now and then his outstretched hands struck against a wall or pillar for he was passing through an arched hall that ended in a narrow passage. He next entered what he thought must be a large room [illegible]

DECISION IN U S CIRCUIT COURT BY DEADY AND SAWYER J J

U S Circuit Court District of Oregon

[illegible] 1882

The United States v William Tichenor and Elizabeth [illegible] Dart Edward W [illegible] and Sarah E McGraw No 660 In Equity Suit to annul a patent

Before Sawyer Circuit and Deady District Judges

(1) RESERVATION [illegible] By the passage of the [illegible] act [illegible] 1850 [illegible] February 14 1853 (10 Stat 158) [illegible] of all the public lands in Oregon [illegible] were [illegible] settlers thereon [illegible] with the provisions [illegible] except [illegible] others, such portions thereof as might be designated by the authority of the president for certain military purposes and [illegible] 640 acres at any one point [illegible] for any other purpose. Held (1) That while an order [illegible] by the secretary of war designating a reservation [illegible] for a military post [illegible] the authority of the president until the contrary appears [illegible] an order [illegible] the department directing the establishment of a military reservation at Port Orford [illegible] and (2) That a valid designation of a reservation [illegible] must indicate and describe with reasonable certainty in some public document or record the quantity, limits and location of such reservation and the same ought to be noted as far as practicable on the plat of the survey of the township and (3) That such a reservation if designated so as to substantially exceed the quantity allowed by law is illegal and void

(2) PATENT ISSUED CONTRARY TO LAW When it appears on the face of a patent that it was issued contrary to law it is void and a court of law will so pronounce but nevertheless the U S is entitled to maintain a suit in equity to have such void patent cancelled

(3) POSSESSORY RIGHT OF MARRIED SETTLER.—A married settler under the donation act prior to the completion of his residence and cultivation may abandon or dispose of his possessory right or location without the consent of his wife

(4) LANDS—PURCHASE OF FOR THE U S A conveyance of lands to the U S is void and inoperative unless the purchase is authorized by congress § 3736 of the R S

(5) FORT—MEANING OF THE TERM The term fort as used in the donation act implies a place of more permanence and strength than a mere frontier camp, post or station

(6) PORT ORFORD Congress never authorized nor provided for the erection or maintenance of a fort at Port Orford

(7) PROMISE MADE UNDER ILLEGAL ARREST The illegal arrest and eviction of the defendant William Tichenor in 1864 from his donation claim at Port Orford or that portion of it said to have been a military reservation and his subsequent imprisonment by military force and without process of law were illegal acts and any promise extorted from him as a condition of his liberation concerning his future claim to the premises was and is void and of none effect neither would a verbal promise of non claim however faithfully made be sufficient to effect his right to or interest in the premises

(8) ALLEGATION OF FRAUD.—It is not sufficient to allege in a bill to set aside the patent to a settler that it was "fraudulently obtained" by means of "false proof," but the acts constituting the fraud should be substantially stated

(9) RESIDENCE AND CULTIVATION OF A SETTLER A settler under the donation act is not required to reside "all over" his claim nor to cultivate the whole of it, and therefore his proof of residence and cultivation is not false if he actually resided anywhere within the exterior lines of the claim and cultivated any portion of it

(10) LAPSE OF TIME Mere lapse of time is a defence in equity in cases not within the operation of the statute of limitations

(11) SALE OF PUBLIC LANDS A sale of public lands unauthorized by law is void and the purchaser thereat acquires no right thereby whether he knew or did not know of such want of authority

DEADY J delivered the opinion of the court—

This suit was commenced on August 25 1880 against the defendants William Tichenor and Elizabeth his wife to set aside and cancel the patent issued to said defendants on February 5, 1866 for the donation claim No 37, the same as alleged, being parts of sections 32 and 33 in township 32 south of range 15 west, of the Wallamet meridian and situate in Curry county Oregon So far as the same includes a certain "military reservation" or that the defendants be declared the trustees thereof for the plaintiff and required to convey the same to it

On April 13, 1881, a supplemental Bill was filed, in which the death of the defendant, Elizabeth Tichenor, was alleged, and by which her children Jacob B Tichenor, Anna Dart and Sarah E McGraw and the husbands of the two latter, George Dart and Edward W McGraw were made defendants in the suit

The Bill alleges that in July 1851 the defendant, William Tichenor settled upon said donation No 37 under the Donation act of September 27, 1850, and immediately laid out a town thereon, which he called Port Orford, that in September 1851 Lieut Wyman of the United States Army with the consent of William Tichenor, erected some buildings upon a portion of said town site for the use of the United States soldiers when stationed at that point; "that on October 16, 1851 Gen Hitchcock," then in command of the United States troops stationed at that place ordered that a military reservation be established there, and that a tract of land be selected and set apart and reserved for that purpose, that soon after, and in pursuance of said order said Wyman "caused a tract of land to be marked out for and as a military reserve" including the buildings aforesaid and bounded so far as it was within the lines of said donation as follows—"Beginning where the east line of Redwood street in said town of Port Orford prolonged strikes the south line of Tichenor's claim, thence along said prolonged line and its continuation, the east side of Redwood street to the S E corner of Redwood st and third st, thence along the south side of third st and said side continued until it strikes the west line of Tichenor's claim, thence along said line in a southerly direction to the S W. corner of Tichenor's claim, thence along the south line of Tichenor's claim to the point of beginning," of which acts said William Tichenor had notice and consented thereto, and that about March 17 1852 said military reservation was duly published," that said William Tichenor and Elizabeth his wife released the premises to the department quartermaster general for the use of the United States, and thereafter on October 24, 1852, in order the more fully and certainly to secure the same to the United States, said defendants released and quit-claimed to the United States all "right or interest" in the premises, and "abandoned the same to the United States," that on September 11 1854 the President of the United States formally declared a reservation for light house purposes at said Port Orford that included said portion of the reservation as well as other lands not within the limits of said donation that about September 29 1856 said William Tichenor made the proof of his four years residence and cultivation upon the donation claim aforesaid as required by said donation act before the officers of the proper land office and "fraudulently" included therein so much of the reservation aforesaid as fell within the lines of his donation whereas in truth and in fact he had not so resided upon, cultivated or claimed the same as a part of his donation after "the said military reservation was marked out," that "by means of said false proof said William Tichenor induced the officers of the United States on February 5 1866 to issue a patent for the whole of said donation including the tract so reserved—to himself and wife—the north half to the former and the south half to the latter that the portion of said reservation included in said patent lies within the wife's half of the donation and the said patent was so far procured by said William Tichenor in fraud of the rights of the United States."

"The Bill then proceeds with a sort of a recital statement of the case upon information and belief" to the effect that after said reservation was marked out said William Tichenor surrendered all claim to the portion within his donation to the United States that afterwards said William Tichenor was appointed collector of customs at the port of Port Orford before which time the troops had been withdrawn from said place and the reservation left in the charge of an agent of the United States that by permission of the United States he occupied one of the buildings on said reservation as collector aforesaid but afterwards made a claim to the same as against the United States whereupon he was removed therefrom and the premises again placed in the charge of an agent that in October 1864 said William Tichenor and others drove said agent away from said premises by force and they were arrested therefor by the military authorities of the United States and imprisoned [illegible] Alcatraz [illegible] that upon being released from such imprisonment said William Tichenor [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] final proof [illegible] fraudulently and wrongfully [illegible] as his own [illegible]

The defendant demurred to the bill and for cause of demurrer says (1) [illegible] jurisdiction because the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law (2) The plaintiff is not entitled to the relief [illegible] upon the case stated (3) The bill is multifarious (4) It is without equity, in that (a) The location and extent of the alleged reservation are not given with any certainty nor does it appear that it included the premises in controversy (b) It does not appear that it was ever made for a fort nor that it contained twenty acres in extent but the contrary (c) The reservation does not appear to have been made on public lands nor that it was made under the authority of the president (d) No facts [illegible] stating the alleged fraud on the part of the defendant William Tichenor are stated (e) The alleged reservation is void as appears from the bill and (f) That Elizabeth did not execute a legal conveyance of the premises to the plaintiff

There are no maps or diagrams of the locality or the Tichenor donation or the alleged reservation attached to the bill and the description of the premises contained in it conveys no definite or certain information as to their location or quantity unless reference is had to the public surveys

Authenticated copies of these and of the patent to the Tichenors with a copy of the proofs upon which it issued and the official survey of the donation No 37 thereto attached were submitted by counsel for the plaintiff on the argument of the demurrer and the facts contained in them will be referred to and considered as a part of the bill or as official acts of the executive department of the government within the judicial knowledge of the court

And first the bill is incorrect in describing the donation No 37 in effect as being only parts of sections 32 and 33 of township 32 south of range 15 west. From the surveys it appears that said donation comprises 403.14 acres in said sections 32 and 33 and also 237.20 acres in sections 4 and 5 of township 33 south of the same range and that the premises in controversy in this suit lie wholly in the southwest quarter of said section 5 and probably contain not to exceed 20 acres while the remainder of the reservation marked out as alleged in the bill lies immediately to the westward of the Tichenor donation and taken altogether contains over 200 acres

The allegation that the defendant William Tichenor after his release from Alcatraz in 1864 made final proof of his residence and cultivation on the donation No 37 is also erroneous as appears from the bill itself and the documents submitted therewith said final proof having been made some eight years before that date

On an extract from the surveyor general's map of Oregon at sundry points on the line of the coast of which Port Orford is one certain circular shaped tracts containing no specified quantity, were surrounded with a blue shading and on September 11 1854 the president endorsed thereon— Let the tracts shaded blue on the within diagram be reserved for light house purposes" (Signed) Franklin Pierce

On September 16 1854, this diagram was sent by the commissioner of the general land office to the surveyor general of Oregon with a letter informing him that the president has directed the reservation of a sufficient quantity of land at each point for light house purposes as follows * * * * * at Cape Orford or north cape of Tichenor bay and instructed him to cause the same to be noted on the maps and documents of his office so that they would not be overlooked when the surveys of the public lands should be extended to those points and added— The light house board has promised to furnish this office with descriptions of the exact locations when made and copies thereof will be forwarded to you when received "

But it does not appear from the public surveys that any note or memorandum of any such reservation was ever entered or made thereon In fact, no specific reservation was made or designated by the president's order It was in legal effect, only a precautionary direction that reservations should be established at the points named when the surveys were extended there, and evidently it was contemplated that the final location and description of them would be made by the light house board and furnished to the land office for formal entry on the maps of the public surveys

A reservation for light house purposes at that date could only be made by authority of the president upon the assumption that it was a "needful public use," and then it could only contain 20 acres How much land was contained within the blue lines on the diagram endorsed by the president on September 11 1854, no one knows, nor were they intended to do more than to indicate the point or headland where such reservation should be made thereafter

But, it is now understood that so far as this case is concerned the claim that the premises in controversy are within a light house reservation is abandoned And it is admitted by the counsel for the plaintiff that if there is a reservation for light house purposes at Port Orford it lies wholly to the south and west of the Tichenor donation over on the headland

Besides it was not in the power of the president to establish or declare a reservation for light house purposes upon land already reserved for military or other purposes If there was a valid reservation established at Port Orford prior to September 11 1854 for a military post as claimed by the plaintiff the land contained in it was thereby appropriated and withdrawn from the public domain and could not be thereafter otherwise appropriated except by the authority of congress Wilcox v Jackson 13 Pet 513

As to the first point made by the demurrer it is not well taken True if the patent was issued contrary to law as alleged and that fact appeared upon the face of the patent when compared with the law it is void and a court of law would so pronounce But the United States is also entitled to have such void patent cancelled and may maintain a suit in equity for that purpose U S v Stone 2 Wall 535 U S v C P Railway Co 9 P C Law Jour 347, W S v Mullan 1 Id 116

Neither is the objection that Mrs Tichenor's conveyance or quit claim to the United States was not duly executed of any moment

At the date of the alleged conveyances the claim was occupied by the husband as a settler thereon under the donation act engaged in the performance of the conditions of residence and cultivation on the completion of which the title to the land would inure to him and his wife in equal parts In the meantime the wife had no control over or interest in the premises She was not a settler and her husband could occupy or dispose of or abandon his possessory right in his claim without reference to her When her husband complied with the conditions of the act making the grant then she became the owner as the direct donee of the United States of the one half of the land included in her husband's settlement But until then it was in the power of the husband to abandon or dispose of his location or possessory right as he saw proper and thereafter neither he nor his wife would have any interest in the premises under the act Lamb v Starr 1 Deady 360 Fields v Squires 1 Id Hall v Russell 111 U S 503 Vance v Burbank Id 320

Neither did these conveyances of William and Elizabeth Tichenor have the effect to vest any interest in the premises in the plaintiff Irrespective of the fact that the grantors in this [illegible] had nothing in the premises to convey except the possessory right of the settler William Tichenor there was no authority upon the part of the grantee to purchase and therefore they were not conveyances valid and operative By § 7 of the act of May 1 1820 (3 Stat 568, § 3736 R S) relating to the treasury, war and navy departments it is provided that no land shall be purchased on account of the United States except under a law authorizing such purchase It is not claimed that there was any law authorizing any one to purchase this property and without such authority the purchase was void 11 Opin 201 The only effect that can be given to these writings in this case is as evidence that the settler thereby intended to abandon so much of his claim whereupon it again became a part of the public domain and might be appropriated by any one for any purpose or use authorized by law

The authority to establish a reservation of the public lands in Oregon for any purpose is found in §14 of the donation act of September 27 1850 (9 Stat 500) and §9 of the act of February 14 1853 (10 Stat 158) amendatory thereof In the first it is declared "That such portions of the public lands as may be designated under the authority of the president of the United States for forts magazines arsenals dockyards and other needful public uses shall be reserved and excepted from the operation of this act Provided That if it shall be deemed necessary in the judgment of the president to include in any such reservation the improvement of any settler made previous to the passage of this act it shall in such case be the duty of the secretary of war to cause the value of such improvements to be ascertained and the amount so ascertained shall be paid to the party entitled thereto out of any money not otherwise appropriated "

The pre-emption act of September 14 1841 (5 Stat 457) was not extended over Oregon until July 17 1854 (10 Stat 305) and this is the first act of congress providing for the disposition of or affecting the title to public lands in Oregon unless it be the grant to certain religious societies of the missionary stations occupied by them contained in §1 of the act of August 14 1848 (9 Stat 323) [illegible] 21 How 230 [illegible] v City of Portland 1 Deady 7

By § 9 of the amendatory act supra the power of the president to reserve lands from the operation of said act was qualified so that all reservations theretofore and thereafter made under said §14 of the original act should be limited to an amount not exceeding 20 acres at any one place except in the case of forts when the amount should not exceed 640 acres at any one place

The power to dispose of the public lands is granted to congress Art IV §3 U S Con; U S v Gratiot 14 Pet 537 No appropriation of them can be made for any purpose but by the authority of congress U S v Fitzgerald 15 Pet 421 By the donation act, congress disposed of all the public lands in Oregon to persons who should become settlers thereon and otherwise comply with the provisions of that act except mineral lands lands reserved for salines and such portions thereof, as might be designated by the authority of the president for forts &c

The reservation must be designated—marked out—and appropriated to the permitted public use by the president or under his direction What constitutes such a designation may be a question At least the reservation ought to be described or indicated with reasonable certainty as to limits and quantity, in some public document or record and probably, it ought to be noted on the maps of the public surveys Wilcox v Jackson, 13 Pet 512, U S v Fitzgerald 15 Pet 418

But it does not appear from the public surveys that a reservation at Port Orford was ever noted thereon for any purpose Neither is there any allegation in the bill that the reservation was ever designated or marked on the map of any survey—and what is more that it was designated or authorized at all by the president

It may be admitted as suggested in Wilcox v Jackson, 13 Pet 513, that if the order directing the reservation to be made had been issued by the secretary of war—the head of the department through whom the president would speak and act upon the subject—in the absence of evidence to the contrary it would be presumed that he acted by the direction of the president

But neither Gen Hitchcock nor Lieut. Wyman had any authority to designate or establish a reservation at Port Orford for any purpose It is not alleged that they were acting in the premises under the authority of the president, and there is no presumption of law that they were

It may also be admitted that Gen Hitchcock could direct his subaltern, engaged in military operations in Oregon, to establish and occupy a camp or fort on the public lands therein, or that the latter might do so under the circumstances without any direction from the former But such use or occupation would not have the effect to impart any special character to the land or constitute it a reservation for any purpose within the purview of the donation act It would still remain open to the claim of any qualified settler under the act and as soon, at least as the camp or post was removed or abandoned by the military force, might be actually occupied by any such settler

So soon as Tichenor became a settler upon this land under the donation act there was no longer any power in the president to appropriate it for any purpose It had thereby become private property and could only be taken for public uses by authority of congress acting under the right of eminent domain, and upon making just compensation therefor V Amend U S Con

And admitting that afterwards Tichenor abandoned the portion of his claim constituting the premises in controversy and that it thereupon became a portion of the public domain and was liable to be reserved by the authority of the president for any of the public uses specified in the statute, still there is nothing to show that such reservation was ever made, and therefore Tichenor had the right to include it in his claim when he made his final proofs in September 1856

But even supposing there was a valid reservation of over 200 acres established at Port Orford for military purposes prior to February 14 1853 it became void thereafter except as to 20 acres thereof and until it was re-designated by proper authority with boundaries including no more than this quantity, it had no legal existence anywhere If there had been a reservation designated for the purpose of a "fort" it might have been extended over 640 acres But there is no allegation in the Bill that this reservation was made for such purpose and the facts stated show plainly that it was not

The Bill characterizes it as a military reservation, but this is a term unknown to the law and means nothing except that it may have been intended for a fort magazine arsenal camp post or other military use

A fort is something more than a mere military camp post or station—such as are usual is established and occupied for a few years on the border between new settlements and the wild Indian tribes The term implies a fortification or a place protected from attack by some such means as a moat wall or parapet

In this sense it is common knowledge that there never was a fort at Port Orford or anything else than a military camp or post consisting of a few log cabins for the shelter of the troops and the ordinary guard house and parade ground occupied by a small detachment of soldiers often less than a company under the command of a single lieutenant which was abandoned in the summer of 1856 at the close of the Indian war in Southern Oregon when the Indians of that region were moved up the coast on the reservations to the north of the Umpqua river

Nor has there appear to have been any recognition of this post as a fort by congress in directing it to be established or appropriating money for buildings or fortifications there Its occupation was a mere incident of the temporary presence of a small detachment of soldiers in that region during the settlement of Indian hostilities

Nor can the extraordinary transaction related in the Bill from which it appears that in 1864 eight years after Tichenor's claim to the premises as a settler under the donation act had [illegible] [illegible] with law [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] plain title [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the plaintiff any [illegible] right [illegible] property [illegible] a lawful [illegible] title [illegible] [illegible] possession that "

In the Bill it is alleged that the patent was procured fraudulently that is by means of false proof but in what the fraud consists or wherein the proof was false is not stated Such an allegation is not sufficient on demurrer The Bill should have set forth with the substance at least the facts constituting the fraud or stated wherein the proof was false Story [illegible] § [illegible] [illegible] 21 Cal 664 Semple v Hager 27 Cal 163

But at the argument and in the brief filed on behalf of the plaintiff it rests its claim to relief upon the ground that the defendant obtained the patent to the premises in controversy by the use of false proof before the land office to the effect that he resided upon and cultivated the same when he did not And tacitly abandoning the ground for relief that the premises were reserved from the operation of the donation act and therefore the patent was so far void it is now claimed that admitting there was no valid reservation the patent should be cancelled on the ground that Tichenor did not reside upon and cultivate the disputed tract as stated in his proof and recited in his patent

Admitting that the United States may maintain a suit to annul a donation patent upon the ground that the proof of residence and cultivation upon which it issued was false yet that is not the case attempted to be made by this Bill in which the ground of the relief sought is that the patent includes land legally reserved from settlement under the donation act and is therefore so far void

But this argument proceeds upon the radical error of assuming that the residence and cultivation required by the donation act must extend to or include every acre of the donation

On the contrary it is only necessary that the residence and cultivation should be on some part of the tract on which the settler proves up In this case he the residence and cultivation of the settler was upon the tract of land within its exterior limits on which he notified and made his final proof and his proof to that effect cannot be false even if it should turn out that some portion of the tract was not open to settlement His proof was not, as it need not have been to the effect that he lived upon and cultivated the particular 20 acres in controversy here or any portion of it but only that he lived upon and cultivated some portion of a tract not exceeding 640 acres, which included this 20 acres

Admitting as the plaintiff does, that Tichenor resided upon and cultivated some portion of his donation for four consecutive years there was no falsehood in his proof to that effect even if some other portion of it had been withdrawn from settlement by a valid reservation

It was not his duty to know whether his claim included a part of a valid reservation and notify the land office of the fact but rather the duty of the government to have the reservation if any properly surveyed and noted on the township maps of the public surveys for the information of all concerned—none of which appears to have been done

Besides the plaintiff has been guilty of gross laches in the premises and its claim has become stale The defendant William Tichenor had been in the possession of the premises, as a settler having made his final proof for 24 years before the commencement of this suit, and had received and undisturbedly occupied the premises under his patent for 14 years prior thereto

And although the statute of limitations does not run against the United States it is subject nevertheless when it comes into a court of equity to assert a claim to the rules and defences peculiar to a court of equity Such a defense is "the mere lapse of time and the staleness of the claim in cases where no statute of limitations directly governs the case " Story's E P §814, Story's Eq Jur §1520 and authorities cited in note 3

In this case all the elements of this defence are present and the defendants ought to have the benefit of it.

The demurrer is sustained and the claim of the plaintiff being stale and its Bill without equity the same is dismissed

SAWYER C J concurring

In my judgment the facts alleged in the Bill do not show a valid reservation of the lands described therein for any public purpose or present any sufficient ground for equitable relief I therefore concur in the order sustaining the demurrer and directing a decree dismissing the Bill

The United States v Edward W McGraw—No 664 In Equity Suit to annul a patent

The United States v Elisha H Meservey, George Dart No 665 In Equity Suit to annul a patent

The United States v Jacob B Tichenor, Edward W McGraw Sarah McGraw No 666 In Equity Suit to annul a patent

DEADY, J delivered the opinion of the court

These three suits were commenced on September 13 1880 and heard and submitted on demurrer with the case of the U S v William Tichenor et al No 660 and the statement and opinion in that case is largely applicable to these

They are brought to set aside and cancel four patents issued to the defendants for lands situate in Curry county Oregon and being parts of sections 5 6 7 and 8 of township 33, south of range 15 west of the Wallamet meridian containing in the aggregate about 255 49 acres as follows To Jacob B Tichenor two patents each dated October 20 1864 the one for lot numbered 3 in said section 5 and the other for lots 1 and 4 of said section 6, lot 1 of said section 7, and lot 1 of said section 8, containing altogether 74.03 acres To Elisha H Meservey one patent for the west ½ of the southwest ¼, the northeast ¼ of the southwest ¼ the fractional northwest ¼ of the southeast ¼ west of the donation survey of William Tichenor and the water lots 4 and 5 of said section 5 containing 163.31 acres and—To Edward W McGraw one patent for lots 1 and 2 of said section 6 containing 18 64 acres upon the ground that said patents and the entries upon which they issued were allowed and issued contrary to law and in fraud of the rights of the plaintiff because the lands included therein were a part of a "military reservation lawfully established at Port Orford prior thereto, all of which was known to the defendants prior to such entries

The Bills each allege the establishment of "a military reservation at Port Orford in 1851 as in the case of William Tichenor, No 660 except the giving of the alleged quit claims by him and his wife and the erection and occupation of a military post there from 1851 to 1856 and its abandonment and temporary reoccupation in 1864 and the arrest and imprisonment of said Tichenor and his son, the defendant Jacob B Tichenor as in that case and in addition that on March 30 1864 the secretary of war ordered that the "post at Port Orford be made permanent according to previous action "

The allegation in regard to the reservation for light house purposes is omitted The description of the alleged reservation of which only so much is given in the William Tichenor case as was necessary to locate the portion said to be within his donation, is as follows Beginning at a point where the east line of Redwood st in the town of Port Orford in the county of Curry Oregon prolonged strikes the south line of the donation land claim of William Tichenor and wife thence along said prolonged line and its continuation the east side of Redwood st in said town of Port Orford, thence along the south line of Third st and said line continued until it strikes the west line of said Tichenor's said claim thence in a northwesterly direction to the sea thence southerly following the sea to the place of beginning

It also appears from the certified copies of said patents and the entries upon which they were issued and also an extract from the proclamation of the President No 685, that on May 2 1862 the lands in said sections 5, 6 7 and 8 except those appropriated by law for the use of schools military and other purposes or claimed under the donation laws" were proclaimed for sale at the land office at Roseburg, Oregon on October 13 1862 for a period not exceeding two weeks after which those remaining unsold were to be subject to private entry that the lands patented to the defendants as above stated, were purchased by them at the rate of $1 25 per acre at said land office as follows By Meservey on September 29 1862 upon a declaratory statement filed under the preemption law on May 9 1862 and proof of compliance with said law, and the payment of $206 67—By Jacob B Tichenor upon cash entries lot 3 in section 5 on May 2 1863 and the remainder on July 7 1863 and the payment of $92 52 By Edward W McGraw on a cash entry on July 18, 1871 and the payment of $23 30, and that patents were issued upon these several entries, to the parties making them as above stated

Meservey and Tichenor answered the Bill exhibited against them respectively, admitting the purchase of the lands by them as stated and the issuing of the patents therefor and averred that they had since sold and conveyed the same as follows Meservey to George Dart on January 31 1863 for the sum of $500—Tichenor to Sarah E Tichenor now Sarah E McGraw long prior to the commencement of the suit against him for the sum of $5 which deeds were duly recorded, the first mentioned one on February 2 1863, and the second one prior to 1870, and deny that they ever had any knowledge that said lands were ever claimed as a reservation by the United States or were not subject to private entry and disclaim all interest in the premises since said sales and conveyances

Thereupon the plaintiff filed an amended Bill in each of these two cases, making said Dart a party defendant in Meservey's case—No 665—and said Sarah E. McGraw and her husband Edward W McGraw, parties defendant in Jacob B Tichenor's case—No 666 To these amended Bills and the original Bill in Edward W McGraw's case—No 664—the defendants demurred, assigning substantially the same causes of demurrer in each case as in Tichenor's case—No 660—and in addition thereto, that it appears from each Bill (1) That the plaintiff surveyed the lands in question and offered them for sale at auction and in default of bidders offered them to the defendant at $1 25 an acre, who purchased them accordingly (2) It does not appear that the defendant was guilty of any false representation or fraudulent concealment in connection with such sale (3) It does not appear that the plaintiff has tendered to the defendant or now offers to repay him the money received for said lands (4) It does not appear that the plaintiff has demanded a reconveyance of the premises

The allegation of fraud is insufficient, and in the nature of things it cannot be made better It was not the duty of the defendants to inform the officers of the United States that these lands had been lawfully reserved from sale, even if such was the case But it was the duty of the plaintiff through its proper officers, to know the condition of its lands in this respect, and act accordingly Neither is the question of fraud a material one For the plaintiff is not bound by the acts of its officers in the disposition of these lands, if they acted, as is claimed, without authority of law. As to whether these lands were open to entry the defendants took the risk—purchased at their peril—and if being lawfully reserved they were not subject to sale, the disposition of them by the officers of the land office, being a matter beyond their jurisdiction, was void, without reference to the knowledge or motives of the defendants in making the purchase Wilcox v Jackson, 13 Pet 511

The only ground then upon which these suits can be maintained, is that the lands in question had been lawfully reserved from entry by authority of the President before their sale to the defendants If such a reservation did not exist the lands were subject to sale and the purchase of the defendants was lawful and valid.

Therefore the rules invoked by counsel for the defendants as applicable to a suit for the recission of a contract within the power of the parties to make, but procured by the fraud of one of them—as that the court will not interfere unless the parties can be placed in statu quo—that notice of the recission must be given within a reasonable time accompanied by an offer to return whatever of value has been received under the contract, are not in point And yet it may be that even in a case of a void contract or sale as this is alleged to be, that the court would not annul the patent, if it appeared that the vendor was negligent and the purchaser acted in good faith, without providing that the decree should not take effect until the purchase money was returned to him But if it appeared that the purchaser had good reason to believe that the sale was not authorized by law, it would be proper to annul the patent and leave him to the mercy of congress for the purchase money.

Upon the question of whether there ever was a lawful reservation at Port Orford for any purpose the facts in these cases are not any more favorable to the plaintiff's claim than in the Tichenor case

It does not appear that any reservation was ever made by the authority of the president. It does appear that the alleged reservation included more than 200 acres while the law since February 14, 1853 limited the amount which might be reserved at one place for any purpose other than a "fort" to 20 acres. And while a reservation of 640 acres might lawfully have been made for a "fort," it does not appear that a "fort" was ever established at Port Orford, but only a temporary camp, or unfortified post which was abandoned as early as September, 1856, and never after actually occupied except for a very short time in 1864, for some temporary and non-military purpose

The alleged order of the secretary of war of March 30, 1864, by which it was directed that the "post at Port Orford be made permanent according to previous action" is the only new fact on this point in these cases.

This order implies, as the fact was, that the post had fallen in disuse; and in all probability it was procured in the aid of the person who was then occupying the old buildings, nominally as agent of the government, but really for the purpose of his private trade and business and against the will of the apparent owner—William Tichenor—out of which controversy grew the subsequent illegal imprisonment of the latter by the military in the interest of this same party

But waiving this and presuming that this order of the secretary was made by the direction of the president what does it signify?

And first it related to the "post" and not a reservation and the object seems to be not to make or ratify a reservation at Port Orford, but to direct that the post be "made permanent —whatever that is—a direction which seems to have been generally disregarded The post as has been said was a mere collection of log houses in the town of Port Orford and not upon any of these lands

But if the order was intended to establish a reservation at Port Orford it was void because (1) It did not prescribe its boundaries or limit the amount as required by law (2) If it was intended by the words according to previous action to have effect as a ratification of the reservation alleged to have been maped out by Wyman in 1851 it was void because it contained over 200 acres while a reservation for the purpose of a post was limited to 20 acres and (3) It is certainly void as to the lands entered by Meservey and Tichenor—239 35 acres and twelve thirteenths of the quantity in controversy because they were purchased before the order was made

Congress alone has the power to dispose of the public lands and [illegible] premises in controversy were lawfully [illegible] the grantees on these patents unless [illegible] sale they were legally [illegible] thority conferred upon the president by § 14 of the donation act and § 9 of the amendatory [illegible] 10 Stat 158 [illegible] reservation for some of the public [illegible] in said sections and in [illegible] restrictions [illegible] said § 9

To entitle the plaintiff to the relief sought it must prove that this authority has been exercised so as to take these lands out of the general provision made by congress for the sale and disposition to private persons [illegible] Upon the facts stated and all [illegible] reasonable inferences that may be drawn from them it does not appear that there ever was a valid reservation at Port Orford [illegible] there ever was an attempt to designate one by the authority of the President

The plaintiff has also been guilty of [illegible] in the assertion of these claims and the [illegible] able defence of lapse of time may well be allowed in these suits

The demurrers are sustained and the claim of the plaintiff being stale and the bills without equity they are each dismissed

Edward W McGraw for the defendants
